Over the October long weekend the School of Education hosted the Mentoring for Effective Teaching (MET) Program. The program was led by Associate Professor Peter Hudson (Queensland University of Technology) and Dr Sue Hudson (Southern Cross University) and brought together primary and secondary teachers from UOW partnership schools with teacher education academics from the School of Education. The program developed school and university personnel’s understanding of effective mentoring programs that support pre-service and early career teachers entering the teaching profession. With the state and federal government focused on improving the supervision and mentoring of pre-service teachers on professional experience, the MET program was another initiative by School of Education to ensure quality experiences for UOW pre-service teachers.
